NATICK, Mass., Oct. 12 /PRNewswire-FirstCall/ -- Boston Scientific Corporation (NYSE: BSX) today announced that the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit has affirmed the validity of a key cardiac resynchronization patent in a case against Medtronic, Inc. The court upheld the validity of U.S. Patent RE38,119 ('119 patent), which Guidant -- now part of Boston Scientific -- has exclusively licensed from Mirowski Family Ventures, LLC, the entity that holds the patent rights of Dr. Michel Mirowski, inventor of the implantable defibrillator. This victory supports previous court decisions related to the suit Medtronic filed in August, 2003, challenging its obligations to pay royalties under the '119 patent and seeking to have the patent declared invalid.

"We are pleased that the Court of Appeals has upheld the validity of this important patent," said Jim Tobin, President and Chief Executive Officer, Boston Scientific. "This victory reaffirms the strength of our cardiac rhythm management intellectual property portfolio and further spotlights our history of bringing innovative technologies to market that benefit clinicians and their patients."
